Living History

Like no other institution, The National Firearms Museum proudly illustrates America's priceless heritage of firearms, freedom and the American experience. The National Firearms Museum hosted nearly 30,000 visitors in 2005, including Boy Scouts and other youth groups, collector organizations, community groups, home schoolers, senior groups, civic classes, legislators and staff, along with NRA members and friends from around the world. Visitors have the opportunity to learn about the evolution of America's destiny of freedom, giving them a sense of history and pride in this country and in all those whose lives have secured for us the liberties we cherish today.

Beyond its Borders—Traveling Exhibits and World Wide Web

The National Firearms Museum's traveling exhibits have crossed the country to various events and organizations so thousands more could share in its educational mission. Through its presence on the Internet, www.nrahq.com/shooting/museum, the National Firearms Museum extends beyond its physical walls to educate the world.

The NRA Foundation & The National Firearms Museum

The NRA Foundation plays an important role with the National Firearms Museum, providing funding resources for its operational budget. Contributions of firearms and related items are made through The NRA Foundation to fulfill the foundation's educational mission, while providing a tax-deductible contribution to the donor. In 2005, 287 firearms were donated—enhancing the museum's exhibit and study collections, and leaving a historically accurate legacy for the future.

In addition, the foundation's National Firearms Museum Endowment provides a source of funding for the museum. In 2005, the endowment grew steadily to a supporting level of over $5.2 million, resulting from the cumulative efforts of NRA members, collector groups, companies, and other generous Americans who understand and support the museum's educational mission. Thanks to the generosity of these individuals, the National Firearms Museum will continue to serve as a unique tribute to America and its traditions of freedom and responsibility.
